BUSINESS LEADER AND ENTREPRENEUR

CHAPTER I

A Bridge Between Markets

A business leader and entrepreneur, H.E. Princess Dr. Saba Fatima has built a career spanning more than nineteen years of international experience in investments, trade and large-scale business development. Throughout that time she has combined strategic vision with disciplined execution, leading several organisations and departments at once with efficiency and precision.

Her standing rests as much on relationships as on results. She has established a distinguished presence within the industrial landscape and built exceptional rapport with high-profile entrepreneurs, diplomats and government officials around the world — relationships she places at the service of impactful collaborations, innovation and global economic growth.

Her professional path runs through India and the Middle East and reaches into the wider international business community: trade organisations and chambers of commerce, manufacturing, infrastructure and investment holdings. In each of these arenas the thread is the same — opening doors between markets and turning contacts into partnerships.

Her academic formation joins management and technology. She holds a PhD (Doctorate) in Business Management from Sorbonne University and a Diploma in Computer Science.

CHAPTER II

The Architecture of Trade

At the centre of her institutional work is the Indian Economic Trade Organization (IETO), where she serves as Director. IETO is an independent, non-governmental organisation dedicated to promoting global entrepreneurship and trade. In this role she drives initiatives aligned with the public interest while upholding high standards of governance, and she oversees the organisation's international collaborations and strategic partnerships.

Alongside it, she is Director of Investments at the Asian Arab Chamber of Commerce, which is active across India and the Middle East. Her mandate there is to strengthen economic bridges: promoting and empowering business communities globally, and facilitating trade, investment opportunities and cross-border collaboration.

Taken together, the two positions describe a consistent vocation — building the frameworks through which business communities from different regions meet, understand one another and work together. It is institutional work in the fullest sense: patient, relational and measured in the partnerships it makes possible.

CHAPTER III

Industry, Infrastructure and Capital

Her leadership extends from institutions into operating companies. As Director of Life Span Pvt Ltd, active in India and internationally, she leads the operations of a major manufacturer of nutraceutical, herbal, Ayurvedic and personal care products. Quality sits at the core of the role: ensuring compliance with USFDA standards and GMP regulations, so that every product meets the requirements of quality, safety and effectiveness.

In the infrastructure sector she is Director of Sensation Infracon in India, where she manages infrastructure projects, oversees strategic business operations and drives the company's growth and execution.

Her investment work is anchored in her role as Director of Investments at the Office of H.H. Sheikh Abdulhakim Al Maktoum Group Holdings. There she manages investment portfolios and international business ventures, and supports strategic financial planning and high-level partnerships.

Manufacturing, infrastructure and investment are distinct disciplines. What links her work across them is the goal-oriented and meticulous approach that defines her professional character — a firm commitment to defined benchmarks, and to excellence and innovation in their delivery.

Distinct disciplines, one approach: clear benchmarks, delivered with excellence.

CHAPTER IV

A Global Voice

Beyond her executive responsibilities, H.E. Princess Dr. Saba Fatima holds positions of representation in international business networks. She is Ambassador of the Commonwealth Entrepreneurs Club, Vice President of the Djibouti Trade Forum and a Member of the Business Women Association of Nigeria and Diaspora.

These affiliations reach from the Commonwealth to the Horn of Africa, and to West Africa and its diaspora. They reflect the breadth of the network she has built among entrepreneurs, diplomats and government officials, and her place within communities of business leaders – women among them – who work across borders.

Her contribution has been acknowledged with multiple prestigious awards for excellence in business, trade and economic development. She is recognised for building strong international networks, and for a proven track record of leading multiple organisations and delivering consistent, high-impact results.

A network that reaches from the Commonwealth to the Horn of Africa and beyond.

CHAPTER V

Leadership, Measured

Her professional character is defined by modesty, passion and discipline. She is goal-oriented, with a strong commitment to achieving defined benchmarks; a meticulous entrepreneur focused on excellence and innovation; and an effective leader with strong decision-making and execution capabilities.

Those qualities rest on a body of expertise built over the course of her international career: strategic leadership and organisational management, international trade and investment, business development and expansion, the implementation of research and development strategy, and global networking and stakeholder engagement.

Across institutions, industries and markets, her career has followed one purpose — to drive impactful collaborations, foster innovation and contribute to global economic growth.
